Gold to Be Found in the Ocean-Pla cer Mining and Some Wonderful Nuggets-The African Mines -Mines of China and Corea.

Denver, Col., Oct, 17 .- I met here the chief American agent of the cyanide process for reducing gold. The process is pat-ented, and the agents (C. 5) of the Scotch firm who own the patents are now to be found in all the gold regions of the world putting up mills. The Amer-ican agent told me that he had recently contracted for mills in Montana and Nevada, and that a number were going up in Utah, Colorado and Arizona, In Juab county, the old dumps of gold mines are now being worked over by means of cyan-ide, and the same is to be done with many of the abandoned gold mines of Mexico. I am surprised at stories I daily hear as to the new developments of our gold terri-tory. The old districts are being repros-pected, and from the results it is safe to say that the best of our mining regions have not yet been touched. The great mountain chain running from Alaska to Nicaragua seems to be an almost unbroker mineral bed. Gold and silver are found in the continuation of the chain in South America, and miners are working to-day at intervals all along the western part of our hemisphere from the Yukon river even to Patagonia.

Gold in Gas and Water.

The most of the gold which has made the world rich in the past has come from nuggets and from veins so large that you could see them. The flood of the precious metals which is now beginning to deluge the earth comes from infinitesimal particles, so scattered through the rock that not a gleam nor a glint of them can be detected by the naked eye. According to some scientists this gold has been deposited in the rock in the form of gas. Ages ago, say they, there was an eruption in the bowels of the earth, at which time this $550,000,000. This was the accumulation of sold bearing the sold with the sold gas mixed with gold rushed up through the vertical fissures with great force and soaked its way into the porous rock in which the gold is now being found. It was by this means that the little bits of gold were dropped throughout the rock, the precious particles being so small that they could not be detected. Many of the old miners had no idea of their existence, and their extraction now is only possible by means of the cyanide process. There is plenty of gold in salt water. Scientists say that gold is generally diffused in the waters of the ocean, and one eminent chemist states that the sea water of the British coast contains one grain to every ton of water. The proportion is much larger in the Great Salt Lake, and the man who can invent a cheap process of getting out such gold will have a fortune. Forms in Which Gold Is Found.

Few people have any idea of the queer forms in which gold is found. Dame Naarms in which gold is found. Dame Na-ture is the most wonderful of jewelers, and she has decorated the bosom of old Mother Earth with gold in a thousand dif-erent shapes. I saw a box of gold nug-gets and crystals taken from the Little Johnnie mine near Leadville. Many of them would have made beautiful brooches without redecertion. Some of them are them would have made beautiful processes without redecoration. Some of them appeared frosted, and others had been torn from the rock in the form of sheets and plates. A great deal of gold is found in crystals. Not long ago there was brought crystals. Not long ago there was brought in his palace. Once there it of Paris. Australian gold. It was made up of little gold crystals, ranging in size from that of a marrowfat pea to that of the head of a pin. Gold is found in cubes, and eightsided crystals are common. Some of the gold nuggets from the California mines are shaped like moss. The Little Johnnie has produced a great deal of wire gold. I have seen bits of rock from Cripple Creek upon which when subjected to an intense heat the gold would bubble out and stand up like little gold pin heads upon the dark stone. Gold in its natural state is usually mixed with silver. The new Utah gold deposits are associated with arsenic. In the Mercur mine you find the yellow ore in connection with quicksilver, and in South America it is Placer Mining and Gold Nuggets.

I have spent some time in watching the placer miners in different parts of the west. Placer mining was the chief source of gold production in the days of 1849. It is still carried on, but the output is much less than in the past. The chief placer mines of to-day are in Siberia, where the earth has sometimes to be dug up in a frozen state and melted before the gold parts of the Yukon river mines. The facthat there is a gold placer is an evidence that there is gold-bearing rock near by and miners pretend to tell from the char acter of the gold of the placer as to the nearness of the gold-bearing rock from which it comes. If the gold dust is very fine it is supposed to have been carried long distance. If coarse it is thought that the lead is not far off. Some of the first mining of California was of gold scales. which measured less than 1-16 of an inch In length and one millimeter in diameter. Placer miners usually find their biggest nurgets in streams where the bowlders are Where the streams are fine grave biggest nugget ever discovered in country was taken out of a mine at Carson Hill, in Calaveras county, Cal. It weighed 195 pounds and was worth more than $43,000. A number of other large nuggets were found in this same region, rang-ing in value from $1,000 upward. In 1855 a nugget of gold was discovered in Sierra county, Cal., worth $19,000, and in 1850 a mass of quertz and gold was picked up in Tuolumne county which was worth $30,000 Outside of California some of the biggest lumps of gold discovered in the United States have come from the South. North Carolina has produced three nuggets rang ing in size from 15% pounds to 37 pounds, and in Georgia a number of big nuggets have been discovered, the largest of which weighed 737 pennyweights.

The Wonderful African Mines.

Through the mining engineers whom I have met here in the West and information which has recently come to the director of the mint at Washington I am able to give some facts as to the mines of Africa which some facts as to the mines of Africa which are making such a change in the gold product of the world. These gold mines are a surprise to geologists. One famous man said that he would have rather expected to find gold in the fens of Scotland than in the Rand district of South Africa. Mr. William Weston, a leading mining engineer of Cripple Creek, and a graduate of the Royal School of Mines of London, tells me that he believes that the South African gold deposits originally consisted of the bed of a great lake, which, having been dried up and solidified, was by the action of the elements so heaved up that it stood half on end. The upper part of the great gold deposit is now being mined, but as the region is further developed the miners will have to go deeper and deeper into the earth and the cost will be much greater. As it is, the prospects of an economous quantity of gold from S. much greater. As it is, the prospects of 2,500 feet, and that it exists in all probability to a depth of 3,000 feet. Much of the mining will have to be done at this depth, and according to his estimate it would take about $3,000,000 to equip a mine working at a depth of 3,000 feet. He expects the product of the African mines to exceed $50,000,000 a year by the close of the century, and he believes that they will be profitable for years to come. To-day all of the African mines must be economically managed in order for them to pay dividends. A great part of the gold has to go back in the mine in the shape of machin-ery and labor, and up to the present only about one-fifth of the gold gotten out has been clear profit. There are now employed in this African gold district 5,000 white men and 30,000 blacks. Wages are low and everything is done on the largest and most economical scale.

Mining in Australia.

A number of new cyanide mills are being put up in Australia. I am told that new mines are being discovered in different parts of that country, and a recent report to our director of the mint states that the Australian gold fields have hardly been scratched. Some of the best mines of to-day are in West Australia, in a district where there is little water. In the Cool-gardie gold region, for instance, water sometimes brings as high as 25 cents a gallon, as there are no great quantities of water with 300 miles of the gold fields. There is a great gold reef in this district. It was discovered by two young men, who found a forty-five ounce nugget sticking out of a mountain of quartz. They took a bag of nuggets off of a single claim and came back to their camp loaded with gold. The Mercur mining district, south of Salt Lake, is also affected by the lack of water, but this has been remedled by forcing water over the mountains from a stream on the other side. The parties who own the water works have a fortune in them. Water, in fact, costs so much in Mercur that the mills using it do not allow the steam to escape, but run it off into pipes up the mountain. As the steam strikes the cold pipe it condenses and flows back so that it can be used again.

How the Hindoos Are Hoarding Gold An enormous amount of the gold of the world is locked up in India. During a visit to that country a few years ago I found that gold had gone out of circulation. The people seemed miserably poor, but they had quantities of jewelry. Girls dressed in coton often wore gold and silver bracelets and anklets, and many a barefooted girl had gold rings and gold bells on her toes. For ages the East Indians have been op-pressed. They have not dared to loan their money for fear they would lose it, and they have preferred to put it into orna-ments. This custom prevails to-day, even though they are now under the English se-curity of property. Among the chief hoarders are the Indian rajahs, who wear the most expensive of jewelry. I saw many gold rings set with precious stones worth a thousand dollars and up only fifty years. He estimated that $800, 600,000 worth of silver was hoarded in this time, and states that nearly all of the gold and silver which came into India in turn for its exports was thus kept. The Hindoo buys but little from other coun tries. He lives on rice or coarse grains A cotton rag in most cases forms his clothing. All the money he gets he keeps, and if this hoarding is to continue it is certain that a great part of the gold will eventually be absorbed by the East Indians. The English have realized this for a long time. They have attempted to remedy it, but in vain. About ten years ago they tried to get the hoarded gold and silver into circulation by offering high rates of interest for money, but the na-tives would not respond. There are about 300,000 native bankers in India, who lend to the peasants, but the most of their business is done in kind, the money lender advancing so much grain with the understanding that he shall receive so much back when the crop is harvested.

The Treasures of the Rajahs. The wealth of the native princes of India is known only to themselves. A recent report from an English officer in the In-dian postoffice shows that one native prince strong vault in his palace. Once there it stays and is lost to circulation. Not long ago two native princes died in India, each leaving, it is supposed, about $20,000,000 worth of gold. One of these princes, who had his twenty millions stored up in his vaults, borrowed from the government of India something like $2,000,000 to carry on his establishment. He preferred to pay in terest to going back on his pile, and when he was asked if he could pay his loan on demand he replied yes, and that they might call for it at any time.

Another gold hoard was discovered not long ago upon the death of the maharajah of Burdwan. This was opened up on the death of the mahajarah. It consisted of seven rooms filled with gold and silver and precious stones. Three of the rooms were locked and the doors bricked up. One room, 48 feet long, 14 feet wide and 13 feet high, was filled with gold plates and cups, gold and silver ornaments and preciou stones. In nearly all of the rooms vaults were found containing money, and in one vault there were 10,000 gold mohurs. All was not possible for the government to find out exactly how much they held, and even the exact number of the vaults is not known. This treasure is now in the hands of the maharajah's descendants.

The Gold of China. There is undoubtedly a vast amount of gold in China. There are mines in different parts of the empire, and a great deal of gold is brought down every year from Si beria. It comes to Peking and is there melted down into small bars of about the size of the little cakes known as lady fingers. It is almost pure, often running over twenty carats in fineness. It is cast in this small shape in order that it may be hoarded and easily passed from hand to hand. The officials, who in many cases make fortunes out of their offices, buy these gold bars and secrete them. They do not dare to put their money into the banks for fear that their brother officials may discover their wealth and confiscate it. The result is that such gold bars will bring 2 per cent more in Peking than they will in Shanghai. There are said to be more than 100 places in China where gold is found. In Mongolia there are a number of mines, and in the southwestern part of the empire there are gold workings which are 100 feet deep. The Chinese cannot under stand the fall of silver. I was often asked as to it during my stay in the country two years ago—the Chinese many times putting to me this question in their queer pigeon English: "What for makes gold so dear? They did not speak of the fall of silver but of the rise of gold. At that time silver was just about as low as it is now. I carried my money in drafts on New York, and usually received about $190 in silver for each $100 of American money I cashed.

Gold in Old Shoes.

much greater. As it is, the prospects of an enormous quantity of gold from South Africa are excellent, Hamilton Smith, who is perhaps one of the best mining engineers of the world, and who was here not long ago as the agent for the Rothschilds to look up their American investments, estimates that the Rand gold district of Africa will produce a billion and a quarter dollars worth of gold. He says that gold has been found there as far down in the earth as little nuggets which had been brought to them by the people. So far nearly all of the gold gotten out of Corea has come from placer washings. There are a few quartz mines, but these are worked in the crudest of ways. The loose rock is pried out with picks or crowbars. When such means fall a fire is built upon the rock, and when it is hot, cold water is thrown upon it to crack it. After the ore is gotten out it is crushed between two stones, the under stone being flat and the upper one somewhat round, so that it can be rolled backward and forward over the ore, crushing it. After it is crushed, the metal is saved by hand panning. No pumps are used, and blasting powder and dynamite are practically unknown. There is no quicksilver to gather the gold, and in all probability the most of it goes to waste. The mines are the property of the king, but those who work them undoubtedly steal a large part of the product. A number of foreigners are now trying to get possession of the mines, and within a few years they will probably be owned by English, Americans and Russians. FRANK G. CARPENTER.

THE "RED VIRGIN" COMING. Louise Michel, Famous French Anarchist, Is to Visit

America.

From the New York Journal. Louise Michel, the great woman anarchist of France, picturesquely known as "the Red Virgin," is coming to this country. She will lecture here and endeavor to instil the principles of anarchy into America

Whatever her faults, it is pretty certain that there is no other anarchist in the world half as lively or interesting. It is commonly believed that she is mad, but there is method in her madness.

In the course of a wild career, which has destroyed her health, but not her spirit, Louise Michel has fought in the Communist insurrection of 1871 in Paris, beer wounded, been sent to a penal settlement for life, been amnestied, been sent to jail, een placed in a lunatic asylum, and been shot by a lunatic. W T Stead the English fournalist and author of the notorious Pall Mall Gazette

exposures of London vice, has written the most interesting review of Louise Michel's career.

"She who introduces so many striking figures," says Mr. Stead, "has no daughter living to-day whose story in romantic in-terest and intensity of human passion can vie with that of Louise Michel. She is a Joan of Arc without her victories, a Charlotte Corday without her knife, with all the enthusiasm of the one and all the ruth-lessness of the other. Joan, Charlotte and Louise form a trio of female worthies char-acteristic of France. Each in her own way was in her own generation the incarnation of the spirit of revolt against dominant oppression.'

At the outbreak of the Franco-German war Louise Michel determined to assass inate the emperor, whom she regarded as personally responsible for the horrors which were to be inflicted on France. She secured promise of an audience, but before it could take place Napoleon had gone to

The Commune surpassed the Reign of Terror in its bloody character, and ended with the burning of haif the palaces in Paris and the slaughter of twenty or thirty thousand people by the troops. Louise Michel was always in the thick of the fighting. Her companions say that she stood unharmed in a rain of shot and shell. After it was over, Louise was one of a number of Communist prisoners, the chief of whom were shot. Because she was a woman, Louise Michel was banished to New Caledonia for life.

The Manager Was Mad.

From the Scotish-American.
In a well-known bank in Edinburgh the clerks are presided over by a rather im-petuous manager, whose violent fits of temper very often dominate his reason. For instance, the other day, he was wiring into one of them about his bad work.
"Look here, Jones," he thundered, "this won't do! These figures are a perfect disgrace to a clerk! I could get an office how to make better figures than those, and I tell you I won't have it! Now look at that 5. It looks just like a 3. What do you an, sir, by making such beastly figures? "I-er-I beg pardon, sir," suggested the trembling clerk, his heart fluttering terribly; "but-er-well, you-see, sir, it is a 3."

"A 3!" roared the manager. "Why, you idiot, it looks just like a 5!" And then the subject dropped for an indefinite per
